

ONDACP can support evidence-based prevention and treatment by putting the “jigsaw puzzle” of pieces of wisdom and evidence together so that it can really be used for quality implementation and outcomes.

- Many jigsaw puzzle pieces (e.g., different organizations (federal, state, and county agencies; community coalitions; law enforcement; schools; researchers; training and TA centers; lots of empirical evidence and more coming in every day) spread out on a table—some in clusters but not connected into an overall picture (system).
- The basic question is how does this all fit together so that communities can improve their outcomes? Does it all fit together? Or are there missing key pieces that the key stakeholders can identify?
